Design is Good Business

We are all aware how important it is for architects and clients to be able to communicate more effectively—to understand what is expected; the reasons behind certain decisions; compensation, etc. The "Design is Good Business" Library is now open. Notice the section for "Clients," and "Firms." Come in, take a seat, and peruse the information gathered. And don't forget, there is more good stuff to come.

Residential Awards

It's time once again to honor architects and firms who are responsible for building the spaces in which we live—the places where we are happiest and most comfortable. The 2014 Residential Awards Program registration is now open.  Click here to view guidelines and to register.

Fam1st Architecture Camp: Big Success

The Fam. 1st Family Foundation dove into the world of architecture for the first time with some tremendous results and success stories. 18 kids got a taste of what it means to be an architect by designing their ideal youth center. Oh yeah, and they also threw a football around with Seahawks running back, Marshawn Lynch. Not a bad way to spend four days at all.  Read more . . .
In Passing: James Porter, FAIA and Glenous Absmeier

Two prominent members of the profession will be missed. One who was an accomplished architect the other who was an advocate and friend of the profession.
