Statement of Philosophy

Jeffrey Gill, FAIA

It has been a great honor to serve as the 2015-2016 VP of CACE. During this time, our biggest challenge was the national accreditation requirements to maintain component charters. Building bonds between chapters, we worked together to fortify our common and individual goals to serve the needs of our diverse membership. The outcome of which was a positive response, with only a handful of chapters needing further assistance.

As your 2017-2018 VP of CACE, I will continue to dedicate my time to assisting California components as they transition to the new requirements. Working with the Board and AIACC staff, I will further continue to seek out ways to support our emerging professionals, provide value to AIA membership for all members, while also strengthening the bonds between local, state, and national components.

The AIA is a valued added service – an institution dedicated to the highest of standards within our profession. As an architect and CACE member, I believe my background bridges these two facets of the AIA, providing insight from the member and staff’s perspective for effective problem solving and leadership.

I look forward to my continued service as your AIACC VP of CACE.
